

The Herald and News

E. H. AULL, EDITOR.

Senator McLaurin's letter, in which he announces his intention not to enter the primary the coming summer, was no surprise. It had become evident even to his warmest friends, that he stood no chance of election, and that the only sensible course for him to pursue would be to withdraw from the race. Since he has withdrawn, if any additional oaths are to be required of candidates now is the time to take such action. With McLaurin in the race, if any oaths had been prescribed which he could not take, it would have favored strongly of persecution and would have made him friends throughout the State and strengthened his movement as nothing else could. With him out of the race, however, the cry cannot be raised that it is persecution of any one man, and if it is necessary to throw any additional safeguards around the primary now is the time to do so.

Near London, England, on Monday of this week died one of the famous American men of Letters, Bret Harte. Sixty-three years ago he was born in Albany, N. Y. His family emigrated to California when he was fifteen years old, and after a few years experience as a miner in the mining camps of California, and a short experience as a type setter he began his literary career, by founding the Californian. His fame as an author though, was first established when he became editor of the Overland Monthly, the famous Pacific coast literary magazine. Here first appeared those thrilling tales of life in the western mining camps: "The Luck of Roaring Camp," and "The Outcasts of Poker Flat." To this period also belongs the humorous poem "The Heathen Chinee," possibly the most widely known of all his literary productions. Some of the better known of his other productions are: "Tales of the Argonauts," "Two Men of Sandy Bar" and "The Twins of Table Mountain."

ADMIRAL SAMPSON.

Speaking of the death of Admiral Sampson, which occurred on Tuesday afternoon, the Atlanta Journal says:

The death of Admiral Sampson was a release from long suffering, mental and physical, the close of a very notable career.

The latter years of his life were saddened by strife and clamor that were the results of the injudicious zeal of friends who meant well, but who placed him in an unfortunate position. Now that he has passed to peace, even his enemies will remember the illustrious service of this man to his country, and impartial posterity will lay upon his tomb the honors he so richly deserves. It may be said without injustice to any one that the reconstruction of the United States navy and the remarkable advance of our government in naval science in the last ten years are due more to William T. Sampson than any other man connected with that service. It is well within the fact to declare that as an authority on naval construction and as a naval tactician he had no peer in this country at least.

He did a work for the advancement of our navy, for its adaptation to modern standards and in the laying of plans for its present strength and excellence which will have won for him a high place in the estimation of all who know the record and entitle him to the lasting gratitude of his fellow-countrymen. The above is true. Sampson's friends were his worst enemies and did more than all else to keep him from appearing in a true light before the American people. But in a few years, when the petty strifes and controversies with which the close of his life was filled are forgotten, then will the work which he did in the upbuilding of the American navy and the part which he played in the Spanish-American war be appreciated by his people.

LECTURE BY COL. HOBBS.

Recital of Incidents in an Adventurous Life to Students at Patton Seminary at Dallas, Texas.

The young ladies of Patton Seminary at Oak Cliff yesterday morning listened to an address by Col. John F. Hobbs, of New York City. President Laird of the seminary is a colleague of the Colonel's. He called upon the latter, and finally induced him to give the young ladies of the seminary a talk.

Col. Hobbs is a delegate to the convention of the Interstate Cottonseed Crushers' Association, now in session in Dallas. His subject was "The Female Mind and Character as Factors in the World's Affairs." The speaker held his audience at will in moods of laughter, thought and other humors during the entire time of his lecture. The incidents recounted were those requested of him by Mr. Laird. They included some of Col. Hobbs' adventures as an explorer, his shipwrecks and escapes, and some of the extraordinary circumstances which gave direction and ginger to his life of adventure in the treacherous wilds of the universe.

He paid a high tribute to American womanhood, and expressed his surprise at the extreme culture and air of refinement in this young but robust city of Texas. After the adjournment of the crushers' convention Col. Hobbs rejoins his family in South Carolina, and after seeing the Charleston Exposition will return to his field of labor in New York City. He is delighted with Texas.—Dallas News, April 30.

Memorial Day.
The people of Newberry are coming
To the front as they always do,
To honor the Confederate soldiers
That were killed by the boys in blue;
The boys that are sleeping and shrouded
In the old time Confederate gray,
Shall receive the respect of our country
On this memorial day.

The day set apart by the people,
The day of which you often have read,
The day to prepare our flowers
For our Confederate dead.

The day for us all to remember
The day that is sacred we say,
The day that brings to our memory
The heroes who died in the gray.

Then let us assemble and praise them,
Tis all that we mortals can do,
And trust our heavenly father,
For he already has carried them
Through.

And bade them enter his kingdom,
That kingdom that's fairer than day,
And be healed of the wounds that befell them,
While in Confederate gray.

Then let us go forward this morning
To the place where our soldier boys
Rest,

And lay our garlands gently
Over their upturned breast,
And ask a blessing from heaven
To come down upon us today,
While we wreath with flowers the
Places
Where our Southern heroes lay.

And while we praise the departed,
We shall not forget the ones who
Are still here with us in Dixie,
After serving their country so true;
They deserve a part of our praises
And a part of the flowers so fair;
To be plucked from the soil of Dixie
For our surviving heroes to wear.

Then let us observe the occasion,
Memorial days are but few,
And we don't have the pleasure so often
Of paying our tributes to,
The boys who fought for old Dixie
Both those who are living and they,
Who gave their lives for their country,
We'll remember them well today.

No Loss of Time.

I have sold Chamberlain's Colic Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy for years, and would rather be out of coffee and sugar than it. I sold five bottles of it yesterday to threshers that could go no farther, and they are at work again this morning. H. R. Puello, Plymouth, Oklahoma. As will be seen by the above the threshers were able to keep on with their work without losing a single day's time. You should keep a bottle of this Remedy in your home. For sale by W. E. COTTON MILL STOCKHOLDERS.

Their Annual Meeting—Same Directors and Officers Elected—They Commenced the Operations on the Establishment of the Textile School.

According to published notice, on Wednesday morning the regular annual meeting of the stockholders of the Newberry cotton mill was held in the council chambers.

The report of President and General Manager McCrary was encouraging and showed that the affairs of the mill were in a prosperous condition.

The old board of directors and the old officers were all re-elected, and only routine business was transacted.

The following resolutions commending the operatives on the establishment and operation of a textile school was unanimously adopted:

Whereas, the stockholders of the Newberry cotton mills have learned that the operatives of our mill have organized, and have been operating a textile school for some time for teaching the best methods of operating the machinery, as well as the most economic processes in the manufacture of cotton goods;

Therefore be it resolved, That the stockholders of the Newberry cotton mills commend our operatives for these efforts on their part to make themselves more efficient and the operation of the mill more successful.

Be it further resolved, That we congratulate them on the success of their efforts, and assure them that this most meritorious action is highly appreciated by the stockholders.

Be it further resolved, That the encouragement and assistance which the directors may at any time give to the textile school meets with our approbation.

A DAY ON SALUDA.

A Pleasant Day and Night With "Bill" Bedenbaugh and J. H. Hair on Saluda River—Fish! Fish! Fish!

On Tuesday evening this reporter had the pleasure of taking a trip to Chappells with Messrs. Wm. P. Bedenbaugh and J. H. Hair, the barber. Hair had several close shaves, Bedenbaugh a narrow escape from being killed by a catfish, which he claimed had legs, that ran up the railroad bank with him and came near doing him up; and well, if we have time enough, we think we'll survive, for we still see snake heads bobbing up out of the water—that's enough.

It was a delightful trip, indeed; and we are indebted for a large amount of our pleasure and success to Messrs. Si Mills and Jim Connelly, two as big-hearted fellows as ever lived, for assistance and kindnesses shown.

That we caught fish, it is sufficient to say that "Bill" Bedenbaugh was along, and if the reader don't believe it, ask Mayor Klettner.

The catch was abundant, and the three brought back about fifty pounds—as pretty lot of fish as has ever been brought to Newberry.

All we have to say is, we're on the list for the next trip.
